Give the substance of the following passage :

Examinations are an integral part of academic life. They have been the traditional and conventional ways of testing a person's talent, level of understanding and his range of study. One's performance in examinations generally determines one's ability and career prospects.

Examinations are there in the schools, colleges and universities to be faced by one to prove his/her learning abilities. Examinations are there to be faced to get oneself selected for any employment. Even the university toppers need to pass all-India level competitive examinations to get themselves selected to any administrative service. Such being the importance of examinations, one should face them with proper preparation and conviction. One should not take the consolation from the old adage, "failures are the pillars of success". No doubt, repeated failures help one in gathering experience. But it must not be forgotten that student life covers a limited period of time in our life. Since student life provides the basis for a future career, one should take it seriously and try to come out successful in the successive examinations. Good results in examinations ensure a better prospect in future life.

Electric power has proved itself to be the life-force of modern civilization all over the world. As the body of any animal, including man, is kept animated by the life-force, so is the modern civilization kept animated by electric power. Michael Faraday discovered electric power. After him many scientists contributed to gathering electric power from various sources for its use for different purposes. Now-a-days, power is tapped from various sources. Among them hydropower projects and thermal power projects are widely prevalent. In hydroelectric power projects wheels are run with the help of water currents of rivers and streams. The wheels propelled by water current generate electric power. In thermal power projects, electric power is generated by burning coal. Portable generators also produce electric power when they are run burning diesel or kerosene. Since recent times electric power is gathered from sunshine and wind also.
